Search for new Fowlerville school superintendent now underway

By Steve Horton

The search for a new Fowlerville school superintendent is now underway. Under a tentative plan adopted last Tuesday by the board of education's personnel committee, it will be a two-part process. An interim superintendent will be appointed to run the district during the coming weeks, along with the selection of a search firm to help find a new superintendent.

The person selected from that search will replace Wayne Roedel who is leaving the district to assume the post of superintendent at Greenville Public Schools. Roedel is still working at Fowlerville, but had indicated his plans to depart in early October.

Based on the plan, the goal is to have an interim superintendent in place by the week of Oct. 17th if possible, but no later than the week of Oct. 24th. The board will be scheduling a special meeting to interview interim candidates.

The board is also holding a special meeting on Oct. 11th to hear presentations from two search firms. Those two organizations are Michigan Leadership Institute (MLI) and Rod Green, whom the district has worked with before and is a consultant with the Michigan Association of School Boards. The timetable is for the board to choose one of those firms at that meeting, with the formal search then commencing. Using criteria from the board, the firm will solicit applications, review them, and then offer recommendations for further review and face-toface interviews.

Roedel was offered the Greenville post on Sept. 13th.

He came to the Fowlerville Community Schools in 2004, having been hired as the new assistant high school principal. He subsequently served as the high school principal for eight years and was the assistant superintendent for a year before before taking over his current position as superintendent.

Michigan Dept. of Education responds to questions on teacher training videos

Note: the Michigan Dept. of Education responded to questions about its teacher training videos concerning LGBTQ students with the following news release.

Protecting and respecting all children takes the partnership of parents, educators, and students, the Michigan Department of Education (MDE) said in a news release.

Family engagement is foundational to work with and on behalf of children, and collaborative relationships among parents, families, educators, and school staff are necessary to support the health, wellbeing, and academic success of every student.

"Parents, educators, school staff, and the community work together to support and educate children," said State Superintendent Dr. Michael Rice. "Making space in our schools for all our students, including our LGBTQ children, is vital so kids can learn and grow in safe and positive environments. The involvement and partnership of parents and educators are always encouraged.

"Parents are our children's first teachers and schools are committed to strong partnerships with parents," Dr. Rice said. "Students are best supported when a strong home-school partnership is developed and maintained."

To ensure the academic success and safety of every student, school staff work closely with parents and other family members to meet the needs of their children. LGBTQ+ students are among those who benefit from additional support. School staff across Michigan have expressed an overwhelming desire to learn more about how they can protect and support LGBTQ+ students and focus on the important work of educating all students.

In response to requests from local school districts across Michigan for professional development that equips schools to be safe and supportive for LGBTQ+ students, MDE conducts professional development sessions to help school staff create a school culture and climate where teachers can focus on teaching and all students can thrive. These sessions include an overview of state and federal laws, research, and best practices, as well as discussions of the nuanced situations that districts encounter.

School staff are encouraged to work closely with parents to meet the needs of their LGBTQ+ students because of the central role that the support of parents and other caregivers plays in a young person's life. Research has shown that affirming homes and families are associated with a reduction in the risk of suicidality, as well as an increase in health, wellbeing, and academic outcomes.

"Living in a small, rural, conservative area gives a much different perspective," said Stella Shananaquet, a parent from Adrian. "We are ever so thankful for supportive educators, including our district superintendent, who did the right thing and supported us before there was professional development. We hope that there comes a day when all LGBTQ students can feel that supported."

"Our transgender son knows that his school is a safe place for him, and that the educators in his school respect him for who he is," said Pete Tchoryk, a parent of a transgender child from Dexter. "His school is filled with compassion. In addition, staff members have knowledge, resources, and confidence to support him. They have been equipped with the tools they need to support our son."

Parents, educators, support staff, and community members all have roles to play in making sure our children are safe and protected and have the opportunity to reach their fullest potential, Dr. Rice said.

Michigan House Report

By Bob Bezotte, 47nd District

Michigan Dept. of Education training videos 'inexusable'

Today, I write about a very serious problem currently taking place in our state. The Michigan Department of Education (MDE) has released a series of training videos that suggest educators should hide information about students' gender identity from their parents. This is inexcusable- no school should hide information about their kids' gender identity from their parents.

Parents are every child's first and primary teacher. In response to the MDE's blasphemous videos, parental rights must be reaffirmed in public schools. Earlier this year, I voted in favor of House Bill 5703 – a measure that would require all public schools to prominently post an affirmation of the parental rights already provided by state law in administration offices and school board meeting rooms across Michigan. The legislation awaits action in the Senate after it was approved with broad bipartisan support in the House.

The MDE training videos suggest teachers not tell parents about their children's gender orientation or identity - including which pronouns or name children are using at school. Parents are too often dismissed in the procedures, politics and nuances of public schools, despite the clear language of state law shielding their rights.

I'd like to highlight the following language from Michigan's Revised School Code, which spells out the parents' role in public schools:

"It is the natural, fundamental right of parents and legal guardians to determine and direct the care, teaching, and education of their children. The public schools of this state serve the needs of the pupils by cooperating with the pupil's parents and legal guardians to develop the pupil's intellectual capabilities and vocational skills in a safe and positive environment."

It's important our state departments serve in coordination with state laws. The MDE, however, is undermining the parents' role in public schools. Our states' school children have the greatest opportunity to succeed when mothers, fathers and teachers openly share information, and family values are respected. I urge the MDE to rescind these damaging videos, and public school staff to continue working closely with your students' parents.

If you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to reach out to my office at (517) 373-8835, or RobertBezotte@house.mi.gov.

You want to know how to find JOY? Try Jesus, Others, You

By Jace Arledge

I have been doing some soul searching this past week, actually a bit longer than that. I think though it is just now coming to a head enough for changes to be made in my life.

I remember being told that if you put Jesus first everything else will fall into place, then tend to the needs of those around you and you will find peace in God, then if there is time, take care of YOU!

Looks good on paper, right? I'll be ready for when my friends call, put my projects on the back burner because I can get to them anytime. But does that happen? What happens when we give too much of ourselves to others? Do we ever get back to the self-care that we need? I mean what can helping a friend for the day do to my plans? Weekends may be the only time I have for that project my wife would like done, but I can get to it later, just push to some other time.

I really have no issues with moving things to accommodate friends because I wasn't taking away from self-care, right? I still slept enough, ate healthy and exercised. But I was still putting everyone else first, putting their needs ahead of my own because I was taught that everyone else was more important than me.

Then many times I would get frustrated when I didn't get the support I was hoping for. I was hurt. Hurt that no one showed up for me like I did for them. I was wanting everyone else to show up to help me, for me, yet I wasn't showing up for myself. I was neglecting the person who needed ME the most.

> The world is not going to end if I decide that I need to get MY stuff done first. My relationships are not going to dissolve if someone must wait a few hours for me to respond to a text or voice mail. If I am not available on a certain day, guess what? That day's activity will still go on.

So I am making a change, I have always known what I was called to do. For years I thought it was to be one thing, but now I am feeling another. This one is stronger and more vibrant. I need to show up for ME, protect the time I need to do those things on my priority list. If I show up for myself, this may be an invitation for others to show up and support me in THEIR ways. This will help ground and center me to be able to show up for them, too. I can do that without resentment and with clarity of exactly how much time and energy I have left to give because I have already spent most of it on ME.

My words for everyone this week are:

Take more time for yourself so you can take some time with others. Make yourself a priority friends, take care of your personal needs.

Then ask yourself these questions in reflection:

- 1. What are YOUR most essential needs?
- 2. What is YOUR most essential work?
- 3. How can you center that today?
- Stay Kind and Love Unconditionally

Jud Scott

JV Sideline Cheer

Jennifer Irani: Jennifer is a freshman this year and we are excited to have her as part of our high school program. Jenn is a hard worker, and does everything with full intensity. Every time she steps on the mat or sideline, Jenn sees it as an opportunity to improve. She does not let anything stop her from doing all she can. Jenn is the first to encourage her teammates to do their best as well.

Vanessa Cox: Vanessa is a freshman on the team. Vanessa is always willing to try new things and fill in where her team needs her. She has already accomplished new skills and is continuously refining old skills. Vanessa will always ask to do a skill, jump, chant, "one more time" so she can do it better. This mentality helps challenge her teammates to do the same. Vanessa is always there for her team. offering help and a listening ear. We are so excited to have her with us in our program.

The Ripple of Effecting Change

Most people are fairly proficient at identifying what other people should improve upon and what American culture, in its broadest sense, should change. The sentiment is usually something akin to saying, "If more people did X, then things would be better." Implicit in this statement is that large-scale change requires broad participation, and that is where the logical train of thought usually stops. The idea has an air of pessimistic inevitability, or at most, it suggests a shallow attempt to cross one's fingers and hope for the best.

However, if you believe in the importance of the desired change, then I think we can get a little more purposeful than simply hoping that everyone else catches on. This requires us to consider not just what we think but also how we think about the problem. The first step is knowing what you want to change. That is the part at which most of us are pretty good! But we can get more specific. For example, wanting society to be kinder is great, but what do you include in that appeal? Perhaps your idea of kindness involves practicing greater patience with others, putting a smile on your face, and helping those in need. Specificity provides clarity about your expectations and helps you measure change more objectively. Before beginning any journey, you must first define success so that you know where you are going and whether the things you are doing contribute to that end.

The second step is to identify key enablers to change. What must happen to achieve the goal you defined in step one? Consider systems and processes that contribute to a paradigm shift, but also think about cognitive or group roadblocks that deter change. Sticking with the previous example, some people may resist your definition of kindness because they weigh justice and patience differently, or due to their background or norms, they may define kindness in a different way. This again highlights the importance of being specific in defining your desired change. Being kind can mean different things to different people.

When identifying key enablers, consider cause-andeffect relationships. If your specific definition of kindness is the effect, then what causes people to act that way? Is it upbringing, local culture, discrete experiences, or a combination of things? Once you assess the underlying factors in play, step three is describing how individuals shape them. What do you wish others would do to promote the change you want to see? These ideas could range from being a living example to taking concrete steps of promotion or policy, or any variation in between.

The final step is the simplest but most challenging. Turn step three around to consider what you can do to effect change. When looking for someone to carry the torch, you should first ask what you are contributing to the solution. How can we expect systems, which include many individuals, to change if we do not hold ourselves accountable? Systemic change can seem impossible when it requires participation from so many people, but that is only true if everyone has that attitude! If we allow ourselves to get discouraged and succumb to inaction, then we cannot expect others to act. They are likely struggling with the same feeling of being overwhelmed. Thankfully, there are concrete, logical steps we can take toward effecting positive change. Even if the progress feels small, remember that every journey has a first step.

Operational millage being sought for Livingston County Veteran Services

In the upcoming November 8th election, Livingston County residents will find an operational millage that would raise funds to support improving services for veterans on their ballots. In June 2022 the Livingston County Board of Commissioners approved ballot language for the proposal, which if passed, would assess 0.1127 mills for six years and generate slightly over $1 million per year, if levied, to provide support for veterans and their dependents in the community.

To learn more about the proposal, Veteran Services invites residents to visit their website, where they have created a "2022 Millage Proposal" section. The site can be accessed by visiting https://www.livgov.com/veterans/ and clicking on "Veterans Services Millage Proposal" banner. The site contains third party analysis of the proposal, the official ballot language, and a list of FAQs which will help answer most questions about the proposal. If you have a question that has not been addressed, the department welcomes the public to email them at veterans@livgov.com. Questions and answers will be added to the FAQ list periodically.

'Veterans on Target' gave participating veterans a chance to target practice for free at the Howell Gun Club. Members of the club, along with other volunteers, put on the event.

Howell Gun Club hosts 'Veterans on Target' Pilot Program

The Pilot Program for 'Veterans on Target' was held on Sept. 24 at the Howell Gun Club and proved to be a success for the participating veterans. The concept of hosting an event where veterans could enjoy target shooting was brought to the attention of Mike Peddie, President of the Howell Gun Club, by David J. Mester in 2019. At that time, the proposal went to the club's board and membership for a vote. The response was extremely positive, with many members volunteering their service. Unfortunately, Covid 19 was ramping up and the 'Veterans on Target' Program was cancelled for the next two years.

This year the event was 'a go'. Members of the club, along with private donors, stepped up to the plate. The veterans were provided an array of personal firearms by the membership, gift bags, dog tags, ammunition, access to five ranges and a lunch at no cost. Those taking part served during the Korean Conflict, Vietnam, Persian Gulf, Desert Storm, and Afghanistan. They had a wonderful day at 'Veterans on Target.'

David Mester and Mike Peddie wish to thank the Howell Gun Club membership, the many volunteers and the private donors who made this event possible. They include: Livingston County Veterans Council, Disabled American Vet's Chapter 125, Connect 5 Vet Foundation, American Legion Post 141, Marine Corp League 161, David & Yvonne Mester, Mark Kojack, David Lindsay, and Becky Adams, It is the intention of David & Mike to expand 'Veterans on Target' in 2023 from 50 to 100 veterans with the addition of a more expanded program.

Redondo
Beach
a favorite stop in California
By Karen Grab

In years past, when we traveled to Southern California to visit my twin Kathy, Redonda Beach, with its pier and numerous other attractions, was one of our favorite stops. My husband Ed would drive us out there since he does not fly and the four of us—my late mother Dorothy, brother John, Ed and I—went out to see the sunny shores.

Redondo Beach is in the South Bay area and very popular with all the restaurants, shops and the coastline views. The boardwalk is a great place to see pelicans, fish, shop, and buy fresh fish. There were often guitar singers and classic car shows.

While there, I enjoyed the cinnamon stick called "Churros." This is a Spanish breadstick, crispy on the outside, soft and doughy on the inside, and rolled in cinnamon sugar, with some a foot long.

On our visits we would take an ocean racer out to the marina area and always enjoyed our ride. We would see seals and a few dolphins.

There is a store called Sportswear and during one trip we purchased four teal shirts. We also would stop at El Toritos for a late lunch. Mom (Dorothy) made it up the steps. Alfredo was our waiter and called us "senoritas" and "mother senorita." We had enchiladas, refried beans and rice. The restaurant offered a great ocean view, and we watched the seagulls fly by.

We walked around the shops to wear off our lunch. Among them was Chic on the Beach for hats and sweatshirts or souvenirs with the Redondo Beach logo. You can even get a toe ring at T's Toe Rings and Gifts.

There were many restaurants around, including Tony's on the Pier which had breathtaking views from the Palos Verdes to Malibu and Catalina Island. Upstairs is Old Tony's with many celebrity pictures on the wall. Kincaid's Restaurant has an outdoor patio where you can enjoy the ocean views. It has great seafood and steaks.

Redondo Beach Marina is adjacent to the pier and offers cruises for the family, rentals for paddle boats and kayaks, and ride on the "Looking Glass," a 19-passenger semi-submersible underwater viewing boat that also features seasonal whale watching excursions.

The pier is at 100 Fisherman's Wharf, at the end of Torrance Boulevard, west of Pacific Coast Highway. It is open 24 hours a day for walkers, fishermen and business patrons. Shops and restaurants have varying hours. Parking is $2 per hour, 24 hours per day 365 days a year.

Fundraising activities at Fowlerville football game helps area veterans

The first-ever Military Appreciation Night Benefit Football Game was held on Friday, Sept. 23, at Brigham Field between the host Fowlerville team and visiting Williamston, with proceeds from the fundraising activities going to assist VETLIFE (https://www.vetlifetoday.org).

The Fowlerville team wore special, commemorative jerseys. As part of the fundraising effort, sponsorships were sold with the name of an active duty soldier or veteran placed on the backs of the jerseys worn during the game.

Following the game, the players presented their jersey to their sponsors in an on-field ceremony with the name of each soldier or veteran read. A brief history of those soldiers and veterans and their military service was included in a program.

Leading up to the game, fans had the opportunity to explore a variety of military activities. The pre-game included the Presentation of Colors, followed by the National Anthem performed by the Fowlerville High School Marching Band.

A special highlight was a parachutist jumping from a plane and landing at the 50-yard line with the game ball. The jumper, who manages the skydiving club at Maple Grove Airfield, was Paulo Pinto DaSilva. He is from Brazil, but currently residing in Howell with his family on a work visa. He has been jumping since he was a teenager.

There was also a flyover of a couple of helicopters after the National Anthem.

Webbervisse Report

Webberville Woman's Advance Club held meeting on Sept. 19th

By Betty Dodge, Publicity Chair

The Woman's Advance Club of Webberville met on Sept. 19th at the Webberville United Methodist Church, with 15 ladies attending. The room was very nice and we were able to form a circle. It made it easier to see each face and hear responses. President Nancy Webb welcomed all back from the summer time off. We repeated the Club Pledge and also thanked the women who put the programs and books together.

Our first agenda was to observe the table with a red rose, lighted white candle and photos of Jean Johnson and her family. Jean passed away recently. We paid tribute to her service as a member for many years, had many kind words expressed and a prayer to honor her life. She was a treasured member and will be remembered as a wonderful lady. Rest in heavenly peace dear friend.

We have changed our agenda by telling a kind thing someone has done for you or you have done for others. This included the many personal hygiene items we brought for Homeless Angels of Lansing. We had a short business meeting and member Janice Wheeler, representing us for the Webberville Public Library, reminds everyone of coming events. First a Silent Auction takes place October 24th - 29th with bidding November 1st through the 22nd. On September 24th there was a Pop Up Book Sale from 10am-1pm. The Euchre Fun Night will be on October 22nd with registration at 6pm and play starting at 6:30pm. All of this will be in the Fowlerville News & Views.

Our program was to bring and tell about a treasure from Guest Julie Swidriski brought a lovely round blue crystal ball made by the Williamston Glass Works.

Gretchen Hill, a new member, brought a sturdy wooden small rocking chair with the seat made of woven material. This was passed down from a generation before.

Carolyn Freyaldenhoven showed her collection of swizzlers, drink stirrers of glass with long stems and on top of each one had a glass bird, animal, flower or butterfly. All of these were from her young married years with her husband.

Kathy Ward brought her old tea pot that has a music box on the bottom that plays "Tea for Two" and it was a gift from her aunt. She and her nieces used to serve pink lemonade in it. She has many collections of fine china.

Marge Lawson had a beautiful picture of fruit in a dish that is very old and hangs on her dining room wall.

Lynn Reed had a beautiful ring from her dad's wedding band. It was cut to surround four beautiful opals from another family member's ring in her history.

Judie Christie also had a ring from her family. It was a blue agate from the state of Washington. In 1905 it was the state gem. She also has earrings and a necklace to match.

3040 Dietz Rd. • Williamston, MI 48895 • 517-655-6343

Nancy Webb brought a painting of a barn done by former member Beulah Cool. At age 79 she started learning to paint. Nancy, being the youngest member of age in the club at that time, also was asked by the former school teacher to keep up the memory display in the case at the Webberville Cultural Center. This is located next to the plaque that the club donated for the Village's 150 years. She has faithfully accepted the charge and changes the information on display on a regular basis.

Sallie Brodie has many hobbies and collections. She chose to bring a glass spooner. They used to be put on a table with spoons in them when meals were served only with a fork and knife.

Janice Wheeler described her favorite because it was too large to bring. On her wedding day, her husband Bill gave her a large cedar chest and she still has this. How many remember the hope chest young girls had as a gift?

Marion Sherburne brought crocheted dollies that her mom made. She brought them out of storage recently to wash, starch and held the ruffles up with toothpicks until they dried stiff. She is sharing these with family members because her mom died very young and many have no memories of her

Jill Moon attended the meeting and enjoyed all of the items that were shared.

Phyllis Webster is quite the historian and I'm certain it was hard for her to narrow down one thing. She brought a very old book titled "The Girl of the Limber Lost" by author Jean Stranton Porter. Her grandmother gave her this as a young child. In 1946 her grandmother also took her to the movie of the book. She became an avid reader over the years, not only books, but also about the authors.

Rosemary Cahaney showed her father's jackknife with his name on it. He used it while fishing and she had given him a special hammer which was later returned to her.

Betty Dodge shared a small gold picture frame with a letter from her husband Dean while he was stationed at Toronto Bay, Italy. This was dated August 21, 1954 with an airmail stamp costing 6 cents and sent to Norfolk, Virginia. It arrived in less than a week. She also has many letters from his three years of courting days but is unable to find them. She hopes she can locate them before the grandchildren do. This brought on quite a laugh. Betty also shared a medium-sized quilt that her sister Marion Sherburn has surprised her with on their 60th wedding anniversary to celebrate their lives. It has 16 large squares of black and white photos of the couple dating, the marriage on December 12, 1953, other celebrations of 25th and 50th years, the sons and family members. Next year, in 2023, it will be 70 years. Marion was surprised that Betty had brought this to show and had a little tear in her eye.

We ended the day with Kathy Ward sharing desserts and drinks.

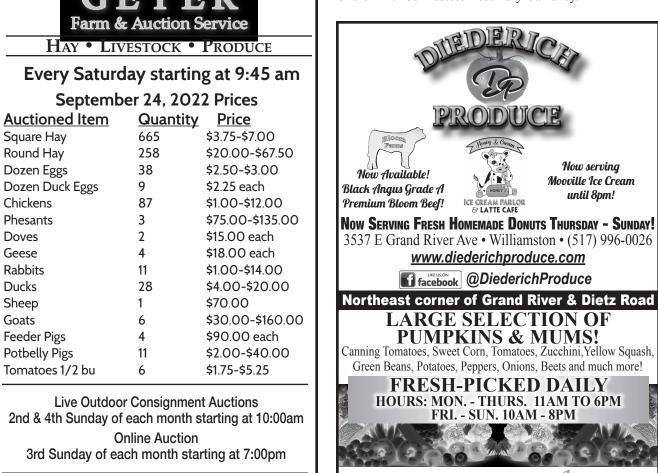

Our next meeting will be held on October 17th at 1:30pm at 200 Free Street in Fowlerille. We will tour and learn about Christian Resources International then go to St. Agnes Church with our hostess Rosemary Calhaney.

'Coffee & Kale' highlighted at this Sunday's Williamston Farmers Market

Fall is here, the weather is changing, and the Eastern Ingham Farmers Market in Williamston continues three more weeks, inviting visitors to stop by and shop every Sunday from 10am to 2pm in McCormick Park's large parking lot. This Sunday, Oct. 2, the Market highlights National Coffee and National Kale Days, encouraging visitors to warm up with a cuppa and buy from the bounty of fresh, locally-grown late summer and early fall fruits and vegetables.

The Market's regular season continues through Sunday October 16 and always welcomes new and returning visitors and volunteers. It's easy to take care of much of the family's weekly shopping needs, stock-up for canning and preserving, while supporting local small businesses including artisans who bring hand made items from their workshops, kitchens, sewing and craft rooms and farms.

Over 20 vendors will be at the Market this Sunday, selling pumpkins, tomatoes, beans, all the squashes including zucchini, butternut and yellow, celery, eggplant, kale, fresh and dried herbs, micro-greens, varieties of lettuce, carrots, beets, cheese, beef, pork, lamb, brats, chicken, eggs, meltin-your-mouth pastries, bread and baked goods including gluten-free choices, amazing cookies, teas, kettle corn, lemonade, honey, canned foods including salsa, sauces, beets, asparagus and pickles, ready-to-eat food, handmade jewelry, hand-crafted soap, human and doll clothing, candles, cut flowers, yard and garden decor, dish and hand towels, bowl holders and baked potato bags of all colors and fabrics, fall crate gift packages, and so much more for your family, home and yard.

Michigan-returnable Bottles and Cans Collection occurs at every Market as a fundraiser for Sowing Growth, the nonprofit that operates the Market. Load up your car and drop off your bottles and cans at the "Bottleground", any Sunday between 10am and 2pm. If your business collects bottles and cans, consider donating them. Special collections can be made directly at your business address during the week. Just call or email any member of the Sowing Growth Board of Directors (listed on the website: www.EasternInghamFarmersMarket. org) or contact the Market Manager Tom Cary to make arrangements for special pick-ups.

For more information about Sowing Growth, the nonprofit organization that operates the Eastern Ingham Farmers Market in Williamston, to become a vendor, to be added to the newsletter email list, to volunteer or to donate to the Market, visit the Market website www.EasternInghamFarmersMarket. org, visit its Facebook page or contact Market Manager Tom Cary (517-618-1630) or EasternInghamFM@gmail.com.

Letter to the Editor

Mr. Higby's Letter to the Editor on September 18, 2022 questioning Sandra Helzerman's campaign for Fowlerville School Board merits a response. He questions her attempt to impose her views on the school board. So, then the question becomes, is it appropriate for a MEA teacher running for the school board to impose his or her views on CRT? I see nothing wrong with a candidate informing the voters of their positions on issues. It makes us a better-informed electorate. The main point of Mr. Higby's letter is to state that Ms. Helzerman's view on the insurrection of January 6 was a "theatrical farce." Have you ever noticed that as time moves forward the narrative of January 6 has changed from "insurrection" to "riot?" Have you noticed that those who continue to call January 6 an insurrection are very liberal, far left progressives, or purely partisan Democrats?

Mr. Higby then states Ms. Helzerman must have learned her facts from the Internet, "which is much like consulting the man or woman on the street corner, not likely a reliable source." So, here is my take on January 6, one man on the corner.

The House of Representatives Select Committee on January 6 has confirmed my belief that this Committee is politically motivated and wants to attempt to damage former President Trump and Republicans. It's a "theatrical farce" because the Select Committee hired an entertainment company to put on the hearings. That says a lot. The hearings are scripted. They are reading their lines off of a teleprompter. This is an attempt to trash Republicans and change the narrative from what is happening in our country right now. High inflation, high gas prices, and high energy prices.

We all saw the violence. We saw Ashley Babbitt shot and killed. We saw how the officer who killed her was shielded from scrutiny for months. Would this have occurred in a normal police shooting? What about Rosanne Boyland? Was it a medication overdose or was she beaten by Capitol Police?

So here are a couple of my questions that I would like to see answered:

--Why has the person who dropped off bombs at the Republican and Democratic Headquarters not been identified or arrested? I find it hard to believe that our FBI cannot identify this individual. I wonder if geo-tracking could help the FBI? Oh, that's right, geo-tracking works to identify everyone who entered the Capitol on January 6, but not if you want to identify election mules!

-- Was Mitch McConnell and Nancy Pelosi interviewed by the Committee and their decisions on Capitol security prior to January 6 and on January 6 questioned or analyzed? If not, why? If so, why have we not heard about it?

--Why was extra security not immediately available? If Capitol Police and other intelligence agencies were aware of potential violence on January 6, why were they so unprepared for the events that day? Seems like a dereliction of duty on their part. Will we learn anything about this?

--How many FBI agents, or DC police undercover agents were in the crowds that day? Did they commit any acts to incite the crowds?

--Why has all the video that day not been released to the defendants charged with breaching the Capitol, or to the public? The over 14 thousand hours of video must be released.

--Why has the request for documents, videos, and emails exchanged with top officials prior to January 6 and on January 6 routinely denied?

-- Why did DC Mayor Muriel Bowser not call for more help other than requesting 340 National Guard Troops to help with traffic and crowd control? Why was Mayor Bowser resisting additional security? Was she ever called to give testimony before the Committee?

The Select Committee says we have to wait and read the report to get these answers. Meanwhile, the main stream media goes along with attacking former President Trump and Republicans in hope of gaining a political advantage. I don't think Ms. Helzerman calling this a "theatrical farce," is to our ruin. I, one man on the corner, plan to vote for Ms. Helzerman for Fowlerville School Board on November 8.

Access your earnings history with "my Social Security"

By Vonda Van Til,

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

It may have been years or even decades since you thought about how much you earned at your first job. Did you know that you can find out how much you made that first year? Or any year you worked? Your earnings history is a record of your progress toward your future Social Security benefits. We track your earnings so we can pay you the benefits you've earned over your lifetime. That is why it's so important for you to review your earnings record.

You should review your earnings history and let us know if there are any errors or omissions, even though it's your employer's responsibility to provide accurate earnings information to us. Otherwise, you will not get credit for money you paid in payroll taxes, and your future Social Security benefits will be lower than you should receive.

You're the only person who can look at your lifetime earnings record and verify that it's complete and correct. If an employer didn't properly report even just one year of your earnings to us, that error could reduce your future benefit payments. Over your lifetime, that could cost you thousands of dollars in retirement or other benefits that you'reentitled to receive. It's important to identify and report errors as soon as possible. If too much time passes, it could be hard for you to get older tax documents. Also, some employers may no longer exist or be able to provide past payroll information.

The best way to verify your earnings record is to visit www. ssa.gov/myaccount andcreate or sign in to your personal my Social Security account. You should review your earnings carefully every year and confirm them using your own records, such as W-2s and tax returns. Keep in mind that earnings from this year and last year may not be listed yet. When you have a my Social Security account, we send you an email three months before your birthday to remind you to check your earnings and to get future benefit estimates.

You can find out how to correct your earnings record by reading our publication How to Correct Your Social Security Earnings Recordatwww.ssa.gov/pubs/EN-05-10081.pdf.

Start a conversation. Ask a family member or friend what their first job was and let them know they can find out what they made that year.

Fowlerville Varsity Football Team falls to Williamston, 28-7

The Fowlerville Varsity Football Team fell to Williamston in a home game on Friday, Sept. 23 by a score of 28-7.

The Hornets took an early lead in the first quarter when Max McCune intercepted a pass thrown by Brady Hanna and ran the ball into the end zone. The two-point run was good, making it 8-0.

Another TD in the final seconds of the stanza came when Alex Petersburg completed a nine-yard pass to Joey Mahaney. This time the two-point attempt failed.

Williamston scored twice more in the second half. Petersburg's three-yard run in the third period, followed by Noah Goudreau's PAT kick put the game at 21-0. A final touchdown came in the fourth quarter when Noah Dunckel crossed the goal line on a four-yard run. Goudreau then split the uprights with his point-after kick.

Fowlerville avoided a shutout when they mounted a drive

Flu Vaccines That Are Recommended for Older Adults

Dear Savvy Senior,

I just turned 65 and would like to learn more about the stronger flu shots I see advertised for older adults. What can you tell me about them and how are they covered by Medicare? Senior Novice

Dear Novice,

There are actually three different types of senior-specific flu shots (you only need one) that the CDC is now recommending to people age 65 and older. These FDA-approved annual vaccines are designed to offer extra protection beyond what a standard flu shot provides, which is important for older adults who have weaker immune defenses and have a greater risk of developing dangerous flu complications. Here's more information on these three vaccines.

Fluzone High-Dose Quadrivalent: Approved for U.S. use in 2009, the Fluzone High-Dose is a high-potency vaccine that contains four times the amount of antigen as a regular flu shot does, which creates a stronger immune response for better protection. According to a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine, this vaccine was proven 24 percent more effective than the regular dose shot at preventing Fluad Quadrivalent: First available in the U.S. in 2016, this adjuvanted vaccine contains an added ingredient called adjuvant MF59 that also helps create a stronger immune response. In a 2013 observational study, Fluad was found 51 percent more effective in preventing flu-related hospitalizations for older patients than a standard flu shot.

You also need to be aware that both the Fluzone High-Dose and Fluad vaccines can cause more of the mild side effects that can occur with a standard-dose flu shot, like pain or tenderness where you got the shot, muscle aches, headache or fatigue. And neither vaccine is recommended for seniors who are allergic to chicken eggs, or those who have had a severe reaction to a flu vaccine in the past.

Also note that the CDC does not recommend one vaccination over the other.

FluBlok Quadrivalent: For older adults that are allergic to eggs, FluBlok, which is a recombinant vaccine that does not use chicken eggs in their manufacturing process is your best option. This vaccine is proven to be 30 percent more effective than a standard-dose influenza vaccine in preventing flu in people age 50 and older.

All of these vaccines are covered 100 percent by Medicare Part B as long as your doctor, health clinic or pharmacy agrees not to charge you more than Medicare pays.

Pneumonia Vaccines

Another important vaccination the CDC recommends to seniors, especially this time of year, are the pneumococcal vaccines for pneumonia. Around 1.5 million Americans visit medical emergency departments each year because of pneumonia, and about 50,000 people die from it.

The CDC recently updated their recommendations for the pneumococcal vaccine and now recommend that everyone 65 and older who has not previously received any pneumococcal vaccine should get either PCV20 (Prevnar 20) or PCV15 (Vaxneuvance). If PCV15 is used, this should be followed by a dose of PPSV23 (Pneumovax23) at least one year later.

Or, if you've previously received a PPSV23 shot, you should get one dose of PCV15 or PCV20 at least one year later.

Medicare Part B also covers two different pneumococcal shots – the first shot at any time and a different, second shot if it's given at least one year after the first shot.

COVID Booster

If you haven't already done so, you should also get a COVID-19 booster shot this fall. Both Moderna and Pfizer have developed new bivalent booster vaccines that adds an Omicron BA 4/5 component to the old formula, which provides better protection.

Letter to the Editor

I am responding to Dr. Higby whose letter appeared in your Sept. 18th issue, which questioned the fitness of Sandra Helzerman to serve on the Fowlerville School Board.

I do not reside in the Fowlerville School District, and I do not know Ms. Helzerman personally. However, I have read her letters to this publication and found them to be well written and quite sensible, probably because I agree with her assertions.

I have not kept copies of her letters and have no remembrance of her "clear antagonism to modern science... extreme antiquity of human kind and planet earth." Maybe part of that sentence means she is not a greenie?

I also agree with her that the January 6 investigation of Donald Trump is another "theatrical farce." Why didn't the members of that committee investigate the "insurrection" that occurred during the summer of 2020 in major Democratic Party-led cities from the West Coast to the Midwest. Twelve people were killed in those riots and insurance companies paid out over one billion dollars in property destruction claims. Our Democratic Congress said and did nothing about that either during or after the events.

As for Ms. Helzerman's sources of information, Dr. Higby, who are yours? Your letter sounds as if you are a regular viewer of CNN, CNBC, and MSDNC. As for myself, I still have respect for the man or woman on the street.

However, I am a real dinosaur, "an extreme antiquity of human kind," perhaps. I confess going back to a flip phone because I couldn't summon 911 rapidly enough on my "modern" phone if should need to do so. I use my computer in place of World Book Encyclopedia, and I have no idea how to access social media.

In conclusion, I do not believe a candidate for school board should receive a poor review because of her political persuasion. Let the voters decide.

Sincerely,

Nancy A. Manson Howell

Letter to the Editor

Today, while I still have the opportunity to express my thoughts, defended by the American Constitution, I do so while there is still time. Those who disagree with me also have the right to express their thoughts; but we better do our expressing now, before Cancel Culture becomes law. For those who are not on the same page as I am; who dismiss me as ignorant, foolish, and deceived without truth, I say to them that I do know the truth: "I am The Way, and The Truth, and The Life." I am confident that Jesus Christ is The Truth, the only Truth, our only Hope. "But evil men and imposters will proceed from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived." "And for this reason God will send upon them a deluding influence so that they might believe what is false."

Indeed, these are perilous times, when I have to hope that my support of Fowlerville School Board and Library candidates for election does not void even one vote for them. A recent Fowlerville News & Views' Letter to the Editor (September 18, 2022) voiced the opinion that Sandra Helzerman's influence on the School Board will be "baneful." Due to my literate ignorance, I consulted Webster's Dictionary for the meaning of 'baneful' and found it to mean "injurious, deadly, ruinous."

I am against Leftist indoctrination in public schools. I am against Common Core. I am not Woke. I am on the Cancel Culture black-list. I am against books such as Gender Queer and Heather Has Two Mommies being placed in public school and city libraries. I am against homosexual rainbow flags being displayed openly in Fowlerville classrooms. I am against Fowlerville middle school students having the option to stay seated when the "Pledge of Allegiance" is recited. I am against a recent Fowlerville High School play that received this review from a student: Respectively, I hope we pissed-off our parents. I am against the destruction of the Republic of America.

I am FOR Fowlerville School Board and Library Board candidates Sandra Helzerman and Gerhardt (Gary) Helfmann because they are also against ungodliness and Leftist indoctrination in Fowlerville Public Schools. John Belcher and Danielle DeVries, Fowlerville School Board candidates, are also Conservatives. Who and What are you for?

Those who do not know The Truth will surely call me baneful. I do not want to be so thin-skinned that I cannot take personal persecution and offense. I must "obey God rather than men." I want my legacy to be: "Well done, Olivia, good and faithful servant."

Fellow Christians, remember Christ's words to us: "You are the light of the world." "All who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will be persecuted." "Fight the good fight; finish the course; and keep the Faith." "Lift up your heads, because your redemption is drawing near."

"The Gospel is foolishness to those who are perishing."
In Christ's Service,
Olivia Verfaillie

In Northern Michigan bison teach a lesson in sustainability

By Lily Guiney Capital News Service

On the drive up U.S.-31 into Traverse City, people expect to see strip malls and a view of Grand Traverse Bay once they crest a big hill.

But they don't expect a field full of bison.

These animals have been a fixture of the area for nearly 60 years. The herd is owned by Oleson's Food Stores, a local grocery chain where bison meat is a centerpiece item.

The Oleson's bison aren't alone. Other family operations are popping up, re-establishing an ecological tradition from a

I wanted to find out what farming bison in Northern Michigan actually looks like. Luckily, I happen to know a

David Kirby is my nowretired high school physics teacher. He's been maintaining a herd of bison near Lake Leelanau for about eight years

Kirb, as we called him in school, began farming bison as a passion project on century-old farmland in his neighborhood. He and his wife bought it to prevent a subdivision from going in near their home.

Now, he maintains a herd of 16 bison, with new calves each year and three animals slaughtered in the fall.

"We call it graduation." he said as bison lumbered over to greet him at the fence. "They're about to graduate from our program."

For Kirb, farming bison is a way of returning the land to a semblance of its historical country looked like before it was even a country," he said. "Before Europeans got here and started turning over the soil and chopping trees and massacring bison. You know, before that, this is what there was. And it really anchors my soul."

When he started, he had no previous farming experience. But now, Kirb and his family have caught on to caring for their bison, in no small part because the animals are highly self-sufficient.

"They don't need help getting pregnant, they don't need help giving birth," he said. "They are perfectly comfortable in the high heat of the summer and the howling winds of winter. This ridge just howls with cold winds, and to them it just looks like they're standing in a field of daisies."

These characteristics make for a symbiotic relationship between bison and the land they inhabit, allowing local vegetation to thrive and requiring limited alterations to their pastureland. Other than putting in fencing and water sources and removing a few trees, Kirb hasn't changed anything on his property for the bison to live healthy lives.

And in a time where farm-to-table, ethically produced meat

is highly desirable, going back to the roots of the land with bison can be lucrative.

On a summer afternoon at Sleder's Family Tavern in Traverse City, someone is probably eating bison.

Beth Schram, the manager of the restaurant for 30 years, remembers when its famed buffalo burger had its biggest moment around seven years ago.

"There was a shortage of it, and that was the problem," Schram said. "Then with the big spike where everybody decided to get healthy, that's when we got into a little bit of a jam."

Bison meat netted features on the Food Network and in Bon Appetit magazine as part of the health-food craze of the mid-2010s, around the same time Americans began their obsession with avocado toast and alternative milks.

Schram said tourists who frequented Sleder's at the time were excited to find bison meat on the menu. Back then, the beef alternative was gaining traction amongst carnivorous foodies as a leaner, more protein-packed way to eat a burger or jerky. Sleder's had been serving the buffalo burger long before it was trendy, but the spike in popularity was noticeable.

"They order it and they'll sub it out for the other hamburgers," Shram said. "They just enjoy it, and they eat the heck out of it."

Now, bison are on the upswing again as ranchers and government officials aim to increase their populations across the United States. And that could have implications for other livestock operations.

If cattle can be managed in a way that makes them similar to bison, they can have a positive ecological impact on the land, said Jason Rowntree, a professor of animal science at Michigan State University and a beef educator for MSU Extension's Lake City program.

"We can take beef cattle in a proper management system and manage in a way that's symbiotic to nature, similar to how the bison traversed the plains," Rowntree said.

Bison have a methane output similar to that of cattle, but experts say they're able to offset it in ways that many commercially managed cows can't. Their habits as wandering grazers don't overwhelm their fields, and their lighter weight keeps them from trampling vegetation in the way cattle tend to.

Rowntree said cattle management on larger commercial farms is typically geared towards maximum productivity and clearing a bottom line, and it works. The downside is that this livestock management style can be environmentally detrimental – but it's not unfixable.

"If we improperly manage, we can have issues and overgrazing, desertification," he said, adding that "We can have challenges to biodiversity."

Michigan's cattle farming landscape is made up mostly of small family operations, where making that management change can be more attainable.

Remaking cattle farming in the image of bison might seem like a long shot, but bison farmers know their animals have a unique opportunity to make positive environmental change.

There's just no ignoring the presence of a bison herd in Northern Michigan. Looking out over the Leelanau hills, the sight of Kirb's bison evokes a sense of peace and connection to the land.

As he walks the fenceline, feeding handfuls of grass and scratching their giant foreheads, the bison follow Kirb with an affectionate curiosity. It's a ritual he calls "joining the herd."

"If I were to die and go to heaven, and Saint Peter would say, 'Welcome, welcome to heaven, what would you like?' and I would say, 'What do you mean?' and he says 'Well, you can have anything you want,' I would say, 'Oh geez, I want a bison herd," Kirb said. "And so I've got one."

Absentee ballots now available for Nov. 8th General Election

Absentee ballots for the Nov. 8 general election are now being mailed to Michigan voters who requested them and are available in city and township clerk offices.

"Michigan citizens have options to vote, including the right to vote by mail, the right to vote early with an absentee ballot at their local clerks office, and the right to vote at their polling place on Election Day," said Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson. "Every option is secure and all valid votes will be counted fairly and accurately thanks to the professional election officials and workers across the state."

Michigan citizens voted overwhelmingly in 2018 to enshrine in our state Constitution the right to vote absentee without providing a reason. They also granted eligible citizens the right to register to vote up to and on Election Day at their local clerk's office. Citizens can also register online, at Michigan. gov/Vote, or by mail through Oct. 24.

Additional election information
